Head Coach Mike Brown

Completing his 12th campaign as an NBA head coach and his 27th overall NBA coaching season, he was formally named the 32nd head coach in franchise history on July 7, 2025.

Brown joins the Knicks after he was most recently the head coach of the Sacramento Kings for three seasons (2022-25), where he coached them to a 107-88 record. In his first year (2022-23) as the Kings head coach, he led them to 48-wins and the third seed in the Western Conference. The 48-wins are the eighth most in franchise history and the most since the 2004-05 season. He led the Kings to their first playoff appearance since the 2005-06 season ending the longest active playoff drought in North American professional sports at the time.

Following the 2022-23 season, Brown was also named the NBA Coach of the Year for the second time in his career, becoming the 11th coach to win multiple NBA Coach of the Year awards. He also became the first coach in NBA history to win Coach of the Year by unanimous vote. During the 2022-23 season for the Kings, Brown orchestrated a historic offense where Sacramento averaged 118.6 points per 100 possessions, the best offensive efficiency of any team since play-by-play was first tracked in the 1996-1997 season. The Kings also averaged 120.7 points, the most since the 1983-84 Denver Nuggets at the time.

Brown began his coaching career as an assistant coach for the Washington Wizards, (1997-99), the San Antonio Spurs (2000-03) and the Indiana Pacers (2003-05). He helped guide the Spurs to the 2003 NBA Championship. Brown earned his first head coaching job with the Cleveland Cavaliers (2005-10), where he coached them to their first playoff berth since the 1997-98 season. He also guided the Cavaliers to their first NBA Finals appearance during the 2006-07 season. He is second all-time in Cavaliers franchise history with 305 wins trailing only Hall-of-Fame coach, Lenny Wilkins (316 wins). Following the 2009-10 season, Brown was named NBA Coach of the Year after coaching the Cavaliers to a league-best and team-record 66 wins.

Prior to the 2012-13 season, he became the head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers. Brown coached the Lakers to 41 wins and the third seed in the Western Conference in a 66-game shortened season. He then coached the Cavaliers for a second time during the 2013-14 season before becoming an assistant coach with the Golden State Warriors (2016-22). Brown served as the acting head coach during the 2016-17 playoffs while Steve Kerr was absent leading the Warriors to a 12-0 record in those games. The Warriors would go on to win the 2017 NBA Championship and set an NBA record for the highest postseason winning percentage in NBA history (94.1-percent). Brown would go on to win two more NBA Championships with the Warriors as an assistant coach (2018, 2022). Mike holds a career record 454-304 (.599) over parts of 11 season with the Cavaliers, Lakers and Kings. He led teams to at least 45-win in seven of his 11 seasons including four 50-win seasons and two 60-win seasons.
